About Our Life stories

We want to hear stories from people with learning disabilities.

This is for a project called Our Life Stories.

This project makes people's stories available to see for years to come.

The British Library is storing people's stories in their national collection.

In the first stage 59 people from across England were interviewed.

Everybody who was interviewed has a learning disability.

Everybody interviewing people also has a learning disability or is autistic.

They talked about lots of different things. Things like...

Childhood, family life, and relationships.

Education and work.

And self-advocacy and social change.

Now we're making Our Life Stories even bigger.

Who we want to hear from

For the second stage we want to hear from:

People with learning disabilities who would like to share their life story.

Family members and support staff who want to help someone take part.

People from lots of different backgrounds and places.

People who are lots of different ages.

Self-advocacy groups.

Disabled People's Organisations.

Social care providers, including supported living, residential, and community services.

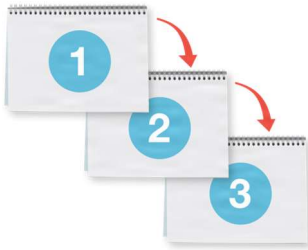

Heritage organisations, museums, and archives.

Researchers.

And organisations who are interested in partnering with the project.

What happens if you take part

We will talk to you about how you can get involved.

You can choose if you want to continue taking part.

If you do, you will be part of a very important historical project.

You will help keep the history of people with learning disabilities safe so people in future can see them.

You will help more people understand the experiences of people with learning disabilities.

You will help challenge things some people think about learning disabilities that aren't right.

And you will help make sure more people are included in the UK's record of history.

How to tell us you're interested

Tell us you are interested in taking part in Stage 2 of Our Life Stories.

This doesn't mean you have to take part.

We will get in touch with you to tell you how you could get involved.

It will also help us show that this project is important to a lot of people.
